We don't need fluoride in our drinking water

Published on Oct 13, 2010

When I was young my dentist would fluoridate my teeth and I had no cavities.

When I reached 17 he stopped (for reasons I am unsure of).

When I asked my new dentist to apply fluoride topically he told me I could get the same benefits by using a fluoride toothpaste and a fluoride mouthwash. Ergo I do not need fluoride in my water especially when they can't guarantee the quantity or quality.
